

♥ to illegal immigrants everywhere

♥ to the victims of the green scare www.greenscare.org

this document is to be considered copyright 2006 Strangers In A Fangled Wilderness by anyone who respects the concept of intellectual property. We don't.

strangers@riseup.net
http://~~www~~magpie.manifestor.org

THE
 SUPER HAPPY
 ANARCHO*
 FUN PAGES!!! #7

spring
 &
 summer
 '06

Featuring:

- ★ Liberal Reform
- ★ Dirty Dishes
- ★ Amsterdam

FREE!

"peace" sign,
 not "F-you"
 sign

As many of the people who have emailed me seeking additional copies of SHAFP have noticed, I can be kind of flakey about getting copies printed and mailed. And due to Stranger's insistence on copies remaining free, very few zine distros have picked up the project. So here's where I encourage you to support our project (no, not monetarily) by making copies and giving them away. You get 5 punk points per copy. Also, issues #1-5 are now online as printable pdfs.

<http://magpie.manifestor.org> plus, the first Strangers' released album, "No Gods, No DJs" by Attack Attack is online.

We would love new content, from albums to zines, for the Strangers In A Tangled Wilderness project, although we are a fairly picky bunch of folks.

~~strangers@riseup.net~~
strangers@riseup.net
for questions, subscriptions, etc.

Radico the Lawyer*

Hey kids! I'm Radico the lawyer* and today I'm going to explain conspiracy laws.

Now, if you're like most of us, you might have thought that the USA operated under ~~the~~ at least the pretense of free speech.

but conspiracy is committed when someone does two different legal things, which, when combined, become illegal.

lets say you call your friend and say "we should go shoplift batteries." thats legal.

but if afterward, you or your friend download information about anti-shoplifting devices, you can both be charged with conspiracy.

which, by the way, is a felony, even when the discussed crime is a misdemeanor.

this isn't a joke.

*- actually, Radico is not a lawyer, but is instead a cartoon character. Heed advice accordingly.

stop being so lazy.

the opposite of "lazy" is "industrious."

in the Netherlands...

the commission for the arts has declared that "a house is not a home without a piano."

therefore, all new squats will require a bed, table, chair and piano.

in other news, the city is installing metal shutters in every piano store.

damn.

okay, huff huff we got the piano up to the first floor, you can send two pigs up now.

let's see... bed, table, chair, piano... where's the walrus?

the walrus?

yeah, didn't you hear? you need a bed, table, chair, piano and walrus to prove you live here.

uh, right, hold on.

okay officer, we got our walrus.

that's a plush walrus.

yeah, well our "table" is a milkcrate.

hmm... good point.

down with form!
down with rendering!

I'm protesting representational art.

the christian church did that in the dark ages, the dadaists and cubists did it 100 years ago...

and the immediatist critique in primitivism does it now.

damn.

why do you want to protest representational art anyway?

I figured we needed something new to be against.

I'm already against pretty much everything.

how about measurement?

it standardizes society.

silverware?

it's a specialized tool.

coffee.

ever see coffee grow in this bio-region?

damn, you primitivists really have all the bases covered, don't you?

I don't appreciate your use of sports analogies.

soon, the police station will be in flames!

wait! what about all the people inside?

hippy from nowhere

where did you come from?

well, really I'm an echo of the response to the hollow culture of normality in the...

no no no... who invited you?

Peace out! I'll catch you cats in the groovy future!

